The reason for the difference in seed size among grades is that each corn company has its own grade standards.

Well, we're going to see something new this summer in personalized service by one of the chemical companies.

A tobacco sucker control manufacturer is joining several other companies in guaranteeing their produce -- money back or replacement of chemical. Purchasers will have to register their gazuntees within 2 days and report unsatisfactory control within 3 days after application. A toll free telephone number is called to report unsatisfactory results. Within 36 hours a company representative will visit the farm.

This company is going one step further. By calling the toll free phone number a company representative will come to your farm, help ready the spray equipment, and spray a few rows.

This is a new service, but we'll be hearing more and more of this done as agriculture becomes more specialized.

A real fine program is scheduled for June 28 at the Steeles Tavern Research Station. In addition to a report on modern day agriculture, you'll have an opportunity to see the corn, feed, machinery, etc. that was used in 1872. In the afternoon there will be a demonstration using the cradle and original reaper as well as a look at the newest and biggest combine.

Brooks McCormick, President of International Harvester Company, will present the main address.
